Chicago Gambler Who Died Sunday.

By Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 12 .- (Delayed.) - After only a brief illness. Mike McDonald, head of the Chicago gambling fraternity, died last night in the hospital of St. Anthony de Padua. In the certificate of death "heart failure" is set down as the cause, but in reality his end was hastened, if not actually brought about, by the arrest or his second wife, Mrs. Dora McDonald, for the alleged murder of Walter S. Guerin, a young artist.

Few mourned the millionaire gambler in his last moments, but among those who were present was Mary Neither the Captain, owners Noonan McDonald, his first wife The second Mrs. McDonald, however responsible for debts contracted was absent, and this was remarked, as she had been in constant attendance on him throughout his illness. as she had been in constant attendance on him throughout his illness. Unhappy Domestic Life. McDonald's domestic life never was peaceful. His first wife eloped with Billy Arlington, a handsome actor, who starred in a minstrel show that was popular in Chicago. Mike forgave her of this and opened up his home to her. But the woman repaid him by selecting a young French priest as her companion. The two Interesting Career of the priest as her companion and made no attempt to follow the couple or > get revenge. The glocmy termination of McDonald's second marriage is still in the public mind. Mrs. Dora McDonald is said to have shot and killed Webster S. Guerin on February 21, last Guerin was a young artist whose name had been linked with that of McDonald's wife. Jealousy is said to have caused the tragedy. The trial is yet to take place. "Mike" McDonald engaged the best legal talent for his wife, and stood by her steadfastly, although some of his close friends assert that if she were acquitted he intended to allow her to shift for herself.

In Many Scandals. McDonald, too, figured in many scandals. As the backer of Garfield Park track he was indicted, but escaped without punishment, although the state made a vigorous effort to convict him. He was later indicted for beating "Jim" McGarry. The indictment charged McDonald with assaulting McGarry with a loaded pistol, and in the trial the state failed of acquittal. McDonald was before the public eye in 1888 as one of the ring of grafters that made fortunes out of the old county building contracts. Several members of the county board were setn to the penitentiary. McDonald escaped conviction, and to make his acquittal memorable, put in a bill for $67,000 for painting the structure, an obligation that is said never to have

Sc Judge Lambert ordered a verdict

On the eve of the world's fair, in 1892, McDonald was virtual "boss" of the local Democracy. He was a supporter of Altgeld and a member of the county committee. Judge Chas. W. Woodman charged that McDonald had attempted to bribe him to terminate certain prosecutions falling out of the Garfield Park scandals, and the gambling king was arrested and put on trial.

Thief Had No Use For the Monogrammed Article and So Left It.

Special to The Journal. Bay Minette, Ala., Aug. 13.-Saturday night or early Sunday morning the residence of Mr. A. G. Martin, conductor on the Bay Minette and Fort Morgan Railroad, was entered and robbed. The thieves took $70 from Mr. Martin's pants pockets and his watch and chain. Finding that his watch had his monogram on it, they very considerately left it on the front porch. They returned the pants to the house through the window at which they had made an entrance. Several burglaries have been committed here recently and not an arrest has been made. No effort has been made that any one knows of to find the guilty parties and much complaint is being made. It is not thought that the crime was committed by a negro, but much suspicion attaches to white men who are known to be loafers. A rigid enforcement of the vagrancy law might have a wholesome effect just now, and the authorities will be asked to do so without favor.
